

Lako House ... Kona, Hawaii

Lako House Temperature & Weather ...

With the extremely mild climate, year-round average Kona temperatures are a perfect 83-84 degrees in the day and 71 degrees at night. Therefore, with very little or no humidity, Air Conditioning in the Kona area is really not needed. When it is warm, just keep ceiling & floor fans running with windows open to let in and keep the trade breezes flowing.

In fact, most Big Island homes have no air conditioning and rely on breezes through their windows. Another issue is that with all those open windows, it simply costs too much to run A/C with outrageously expensive island electrical rates; instead, the norm is to have ceiling & floor fans running in each room.

Temperature also depends on the house design/orientation, time of year, and location. And while it may be very hard to do without A/C in tightly packed-in condo units with minimal window breezes or homes located in valley or humid beachfront areas, Lako House is a mile away from the at times muggy shoreline. Lako sits high upon a 30ft rock wall and is also at an elevation of 300ft; with cathedral ceilings in every room and practically no humidity in typically dry Kona, cool breezes that come through the numerous windows at Lako House are sufficient.

And so, no matter where you stay, here are some thoughts to stay cool ... During the day, stay hydrated, take a dip in the pool, keep the fans on with windows open (with screens closed). At night, consider taking a shower before bedtime and don't bother even using a bed sheet until later in the early morning.
